

USA counts the calories

That is why Obama's Health Care Plan has laws that will give Americans a chance to make healthy choices when they go to restaurants: soon all fast food chains with more than 20 restaurants will have to show calorie information on their menus. So it should change the way people eat.

But some Americans are not happy with Obama's new laws, because they think that they have a right to eat what they like and don't want the government to spoil the fun. On the other hand, people also have a right to know what they're getting and many would eat healthier if they were better informed.
